Preface

The enclosed report represents the culmination of a ten-month effort to provide summary statistics and corresponding analysis for the Supreme Court’s 2024 Term (October 2024 to June 2025), which we hope to replicate for future terms. It is intended to serve principally as an appendix for the SCOTUSblog Statpack (Available Here) with additional metrics related to oral arguments and the Court’s docket.

Our goal was to provide a comprehensive overview of the term while recognizing that much of what we offer remains surface-level data. In recent years, some have taken exception to how data such as these are used, particularly as it relates to drawing generalizable claims of the Court and its Justices. We would like to take the time to state our position on these concerns:

First, we fully recognize that our data provides only surface-level inferences. As many have pointed out, the Court retains considerable discretion with respect to the size and scope of its docket. Indeed, a considerable majority of the Court’s decision-making is determining which appeals will not receive review, rather than what will. It is not lost on us that the population of orally argued and decided cases in the 2024 term are not fully emblematic of the Court’s broader decision-making. While we do provide statistics on the docket more generally, we advise pursuing additional scholarship focusing on this area.

Second, our summary analyses do not make distinctions between cases of varying importance to the national discourse. Not because we fail to recognize that these distinctions obviously exist, but because our goal is to provide an overview of the Justices’ most observable decision-making behaviors – irrespective of the broader importance some of these decisions may have compared to others. In short, they are numbers – nothing more, nothing less. There is no underlying agenda in our decision to present topline statistics.

Finally, we recognize that these data do not belong to us in perpetuity. Once we have published our report, any person, outlet, or entity are free to use them - just as we have been facilitating open access to our data throughout the term. Nonetheless, we ask those who read our report to be conscientious of the fact that we cannot control - nor do we particularly wish to control - how they are used. The Supreme Court retains special significance in our national discourse, and its decisions can surely draw considerable divisions among observers. Some readers may take exception to how others choose to interpret these data. We ask that you not hold it against us.

We would like to give special thanks to Vikram Narasimhan, Zachary Shemtob, Sarah Isgur, Kelsey Dallas, and all those who offered guidance and research assistance in the development of this report.

Data Availability & Disclosure

We are particularly grateful to the organized efforts of those maintaining the Supreme Court Database, which is principally hosted by Pennsylvania State University and Washington University (St. Louis, Missouri).³ Their data was pivotal for constructing longitudinal analyses that place the Justices' decision-making during the 2024 term into the broader scope of history.

Apart from data used to develop longitudinal analyses, this report was compiled independently and drew on a multitude of resources to sufficiently track developments and behaviors expressed in the Court's oral arguments, decisions, and docket, among other things. These include, but are not limited to, the Supreme Court's Official Website, Oyez, and Justia, among others.

All data used to compile this report will be available HERE. There you will find a collection of CSV (.csv) files containing data relevant to the accompanying analyses on Decisions provided in this report. An extended report providing more comprehensive analyses, including those related to the Court's Oral arguments and its Docket, will be available at EmpiricalSCOTUS.com

We are, of course, happy to provide any additional insights and guidance on replication of data and other analysis in this report. For help, please Contact Us.

We ask that any publication incorporating these data or other material from our report provide a corresponding citation acknowledging the authors, SCOTUSBlog, The Dispatch, EmpiricalSCOTUS, and any relevant data sources indicated with the enclosed tabular information.

Decisions

Table 34: What's Included (Decisions)

Area	Topic	Description
Overview	Case Information	Overview of cases decided by the Court, including: Dates of Argument and Decision, Majority Author and Majority/Minority Coalition Sizes, etc.
	Vote Matrices	Justice-level voting behaviors by case and Justice.
Opinions	Opinion Authorship	Term-level summary of Justice-level opinion authorship behaviors.
Historical Comparisons	Coalition Sizes	Comparison to previous terms' rates of varying coalition sizes.
	Unanimity	Comparison to previous terms' rates of unanimity.

Note on Decision Coding

We recognize that the array of potential case-level votes do not always neatly align with a definitive indicator that a Justice should be considered a member of the Majority or Minority (Dissenting) coalition. In particular, votes by Justices Concurring and Dissenting In Part, Concurring in Judgment, joining (and/or authoring) several concurrences, etc., are not as clear of an indicator as authoring or simply joining the majority. These special votes could lead to varying records of majority and minority coalition sizes depending on the source. For example, a decision rendered with a single Justice authoring an opinion Concurring In Part, and Dissenting in Part could reasonably be coded as either (9-0) or (8-1), given that the Justice neither fully joined – nor fully dissented – from the Court’s majority opinion.

To maintain methodological consistency, we code choices to join the Minority (Dissent) as instances where a Justice (1) Authored a Dissenting Opinion or (2) Only Joined a Dissenting Opinion.

Additional Notes: Opinion Consolidations

During the 2024 term, nine orally argued and decided cases represent consolidated petitions. However, only one case was consolidated and represented a petitions emerging from different courts below. We indicate the distinction below.

- Hewitt v. United States & Duffey v. United States (CA5)
- CC/Devas v. Antrix Corp. & Devas Multimedia v. Antrix (CA9)
- NRC v. Texas & Interim Storage Partners v. Texas (CA5)
- Lousiana v. Callais & Robinson v. Callais (WDLA)
- Oklahoma v. EPA & PacifiCorp v. EPA (CA10)

- OK Charter School Board v. Drummond & St. Isidore of Seville Sch. v. Drummond (SCOK)
